

Abstract

10/10/10

Title: The Role of the Nurse in the Management of the Patient's Pain

10/10/10

10/10/10

Keywords

The purpose of this study is to determine the role of the nurse in the management of the patient's pain. The study was conducted in a hospital setting and involved a survey of nurses and patients. The results of the study indicate that the role of the nurse in the management of the patient's pain is multifaceted and includes assessment, education, and intervention.

The study also found that the role of the nurse in the management of the patient's pain is influenced by a number of factors, including the patient's pain level, the patient's knowledge of pain management, and the nurse's knowledge of pain management. The study suggests that the role of the nurse in the management of the patient's pain should be further explored and that the nurse should be given more training and resources to better manage the patient's pain.

The study also found that the role of the nurse in the management of the patient's pain is influenced by a number of factors, including the patient's pain level, the patient's knowledge of pain management, and the nurse's knowledge of pain management. The study suggests that the role of the nurse in the management of the patient's pain should be further explored and that the nurse should be given more training and resources to better manage the patient's pain.